

High schools are not adequately preparing students for their futures. Some students have test scores that are below the requirements for college admission or scholarships, making them unable to get in. A lack of scholarships can make it too expensive. There is not enough guidance for students to make the best choices, including attending college and the degree they plan to study, an ideal career to pursue, working a 9-to-5 job, or joining the military.